As the World Trade Center and Oklahoma City bombings so clearly remind us, terrorism is a critical concern, threatening society and showing our vulnerability. Unfortunately, very few agencies are adequately prepared to deal effectively with this problem, due largely to an insufficient understanding of terrorism.

The CSTI Terrorism I course is designed to increase your awareness at any level or rank within your organization or agency, representing either the government or private sector. This course is for those who have or share the responsibility of preparing for, or responding to, real or threatened acts of terrorism.

This course is structured to identify the problem comprehensively, including historical aspects, and future trends; and, identifies a series of strategic and tactical options for dealing with the potentials of terrorism. Where appropriate, case studies of significant terrorist acts will be used to illustrate these key topics:

- The Strategic Approach to Managing Terrorism
- Overview of Terrorism
- Disinformation
- Targets of Terrorism
- Terrorist Groups and Individuals
- Foreign Espionage Activities
- Government Response and Emergency Management
